

The Mutual Life Insurance Co. OF NEW YORK. Had a Prosperous Business During the Year 1900.

The receipts for the year were $68,582,803.31. The Mutual Life, after placing $268,191,130.38 to the credit of the reserve fund and other liabilities, in accordance with the requirements of the New York Insurance Department, has a contingent guarantee fund of $54,122,022.25, in addition to the dividends to be apportioned this year, which amount to $2,440,000.00.

In 1900 the claims paid arising from the death of policyholders amounted to $1,052,652.92, and in addition to this the company paid during the twelve months $11,308,210.91 on account of endowments, dividends, etc. The general business of The Mutual Life in 1900, when compared with the results during the previous year, is highly satisfactory. The insurance in force December 31, 1899, amounted to $1,052,652.92. On December 31, 1900, the business in force aggregated in amount $1,141,497,883.02. Since its organization, in 1843, the company has paid to its policyholders $54,479,809.

This vast business has been accomplished without friction; every interest has been safely guarded and every obligation claim quickly paid. The Mutual Life never had a more successful year in its history.

The liberality of this company's contracts on the lives of conservative men place it in the front ranks of Life Insurance Companies. For further information call upon any of the company's representatives at their Arizona branch office at rooms 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5, Nicholson Building, North Central Street.

GHOSTLY SENTINELS

Guard a Treasure Vault That Harry La Paz is Looking For.

There is an old prospector camped in the cool shade of some willow trees down by the river who tells an interesting tale of a lost gold mine. His name is Henry Lapache Hayden, although he is generally known as "Old Harry La Paz," a name that he probably picked up down on the Colorado river in the early days. His only companions are a dog and two ancient looking burros with shrill voices.

He relates that during the time that the old Venture mine was being worked by the first company he drove a team for John Luterding and Crede Bryant, and on one trip he saved the life of a Mexican named Antonio, who was being chased by the Apaches. In return for this the Mexican told him of a very rich gold mine that he knew the location of, which had been worked a great many years ago by the Jesuit fathers of that time, who came up from Mexico.

He said that this mine was down in a very deep canyon in a very rough, broken range of mountains. The ancient padres had built a small stone chapel near the mine in the canyon, and lying in and around that the Mexican had seen their whitened skeletons, ghastly relics of a final sanguinary battle with the relentless Apaches.

The old Mexican said that he happened to be coming down the canyon when he found the place and thus saw the mine first, else he never would have seen it, for when he came to the chapel and the skeletons he saw several skeletons, or ghosts, which scared him plenty and caused him to get out of there much wiser. And until Hayden met him he never returned to that rich, ghostly region.

After much persuasion he agreed to show Hayden the place on condition that Hayden go blindfolded and that he must not bring away any of the gold, which old Don Antonio said was there by the burro load. Hayden agreed to these conditions, thinking that if Don Antonio could show him a rich gold mine blindfolded it was more than he had been able to show himself with his eyes open for some time past, and as to bringing the gold away, what was the matter with going back after it next trip?

Hayden says they made the trip, he blindfolded, and after three days' traveling came to the mine, just as old Don Antonio had described it, skeletons and all. The mine was a placer in the bed of some ancient river that ran diagonally across the present canyon, and in this bed of ancient sand and gravel the old-time miners had run several tunnels and done a great deal of work. The bed of the present canyon and of the ancient river is of slate, and on this gold was deposited rather than Hayden had ever seen in the placers of California or the north. This was made more evident from the fact that the padres had dug out and then had to leave behind them in one of the tunnels.

Don Antonio would not stay long, and about all that Hayden could see was that the canyon ran north and that the upper formation was a volcanic conglomerate of a light color. Then he put on the blind again and after nearly three days' came back into the valley. Old Don Antonio had been predicting had luck for himself as a result of the trip, and, sure enough, when they came to the canal he got down to drink and as he was doing so was bitten by a rattlesnake. This proved so serious that Don Antonio was a dead Mexican within an hour.

Hayden found an old sheepskin map in his pocket giving a rude sketch of where the mine was and how to get to it. This Hayden kept when he turned the body over to some other Mexicans to be buried.

That was twenty years ago, and since then, Hayden says, he has spent most of his time looking for the lost bonanza, but all to no purpose, as he has never been able to find it. During the hot months of the summer he expects to earn a little money working in the gardens down by the river and in the autumn start out again to look for the lost mission mine that seems to be so well guarded by a pack of reverend spooks. He expects to have better success on his next trip from the fact that on his last trip he managed to locate some of the landmarks shown on the old map.

MISCELLANEOUS "HAIR TONICS."

Most Hair Preparations Are Merely Scalp Irritants of No Value.

Most hair preparations are merely scalp irritants, mislabeled hair tonics. When hair is brittle, lusterless and begins to fall out, the dandruff germ is getting in its deadly work at the root, sapping the vitality. Since science discovered that dandruff is a germ disease there has been only one preparation put on the market that will actually destroy the dandruff germ, and that is Newbro's Herpicide. It attacks itching instantly, destroys the germ, and then falling hair stops, and hair grows luxuriantly. Ask your druggist for Herpicide. It attacks itching instantly; makes hair grow.

A FRENCH MEDAL FOR SOUSA.

A cablegram received here last week announces that the French government has recognized the services of John Philip Sousa at the Paris exposition by conferring upon the American conductor and march king the appointment and decoration of the French academy. The distinction is said to rank next to that of the Legion of Honor, and is the principal recognition of artistic merit in France. To become an officer of the academy is the ambition of every French musician. The honor was conferred upon Mr. Sousa upon the initiative of the French government and without any formal request of the American ambassador, as is customary. The band under Mr. Sousa's direction played at the Paris exposition last summer and participated in a number of important functions. The new decoration for the man of many medals consists of crossed palm leaves in brilliant ribbons from a royal purple ribbon.—Philadelphia Record.

BEWARE OF A COUGH.

A cough is not a disease but a symptom. Consumption and bronchitis, which are the most dangerous and fatal diseases, have for their first indication a persistent cough, and if properly treated as soon as this cough appears are easily cured. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has proven wonderfully successful, and gained its high reputation and extensive sale by its success in curing the disease which causes coughing. If it is not beneficial it will not cost you a cent. For sale by all druggists.

AFTER MRS. MORGAN'S JEWELS.

A Famous Gem Thief Caught in the Steel King's Son's Home.

London.—The most important jewel thief capture Scotland Yard has made in years was that of the robber found in Mrs. J. P. Morgan Jr.'s house, and his arrest was the result of accident.

A man who gives his name as George Howard called A. J. 25 at Mrs. Morgan's house, No. 11 Prince's Gate, and asked permission to examine the call wire of the District Messenger company. He was shown upstairs, but was kept under observation by a housemaid. He then said he would go to the phone and did so, but he pulled the telephone wire about so that the telephone company sent an electrician on a bicycle to see what the matter was, and Howard was arrested.

At the time of his visit there was $50,000 worth of jewels in Mr. Morgan's house.

Who searched typewritten instructions were found on him giving accurate information as to where the valuables were kept.

Howard has been identified as the man who has been long wanted by the police for several audacious jewel robberies extending over some years, the aggregate value of jewels stolen being $125,000. He got it, it is alleged, $10,000 worth at Mrs. Mierle's, Park lane; $15,000 worth from the house of Mme. Domingues, an American, No. 7 Tilney street, and $5,250 worth at Mrs. Arbuthnot's, No. 6 Wilton Crescent. These robberies were all perpetrated within a few months.

Howard refuses to give any information about himself or his doings. He says he has no confederates, but the police believe he must have had relations with some well placed receiver to get rid of all these gems.

MR. VANDERLIP'S SISTER.

One of the belles of the season just passed at the national capital is Miss Ruth Vanderlip, sister to the former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Vanderlip.

She has recently gone to Paris. Miss Vanderlip is already acquainted with Europe and Europeans. Every one regards her as a clever girl. She is a graduate of a university and university graduates are scarce among Washington's debutantes.

Miss Vanderlip was a great favorite with Mrs. Lyman J. Gage, the wife of the secretary of the treasury, and assisted at her receptions as well as at other cabinet homes. She was considered one of the favorite girls behind the line in the blue room at the White House on New Year's day. Mrs. McKinley is very fond of young girls of Miss Vanderlip's type, who can entertain well for their hostesses. Miss Vanderlip is a western girl.—Chicago American.

THE PREACHER SAITH

The subject of Dr. Rice's sermon yesterday was "Our Possessions," and the text was 1 Cor. 3:21-22. Dr. Rice said in part:

This is a great text. Takes in earth and heaven with all things of the two places. How vast the possessions. "All things." Who can appropriate the words of the text? All men? No, only Christians. It is thought by many that the Christian, to be consistent, cannot accumulate large wealth. The text says all things of heaven and earth belongs to them. He has a warrant deed to the universe below and to heaven above. Let us take an inventory this morning and see what we possess. We possess every Christian, "whether Paul or Apollon or Cephas." Partnership has no place in the Christian system. Each has a right to claim every other Christian as theirs. We are all the children of God, co-operating for the good of others. It is therefore below the dignity of any to glory in their exaltation over others. What a destructive blow to selfishness is a sectarian spirit. Then again, the world—Cosmos—the earth, the scene of man's earthly existence, or, as expounded in the text, "things present." What vast possessions. If you are a Christian climb to some high point and look abroad over houses and lands. Although you may not have a deed to one acre of land or paid a dollar's taxes in your life, yet you can say "all this is mine." Possibly some one would ask if you were not a fit subject for the asylum and would quickly for you they had a little deed to the property. Sometimes individuals hold property not rightfully theirs, and a little trouble to trace back will find the rightful owner. The owner of the earth is the Lord. The whole right is vested in him and I am a child of his. Outsiders are called squatters. They take possession without purchase or deed. Others hold now what is mine, and after a while the Great Judge will take up the title, and he who is in possession but not rightfully will be ejected, and we will hear his judgment, "all are yours." Then again "life is ours. A time to get ready for the great beyond. The golden season of opportunity and privilege. A time of help to others. The only time we have to prepare for heaven and to bless others. Not things here, but hereafter, are ours. "Death." This is not the way we usually think of death. A servant he will tell us to move from the hotel in which we are living, to the mansion prepared for us. That which brings us into full possession of our own, and as such nothing we own is of much good to us. And then "Heaven," things to come, is the Christian's possessions. Its glory, crown, robes, all our own. We will not walk a foreigner then, but can stretch our hand and say "all this is mine, because I am Christ's and he is God's. Eternity is to come," and that is ours. We possess it as the duration of our happiness; as the boundary of our salvation. Are we not rich?

DO YOU REMEMBER CHUB?

A Touching Incident of the President's Visit to Wilcox.

According to the Range News the following touching incident took place at Wilcox during the few minutes stop made by the presidential train.

During the handshaking I. E. Ruth was led up to the president by Postmaster S. J. Giddes. The old man, now nearly blind, extended his hand, which was grasped by that of the president. "Do you know Isaac Ruth?" he asked. "No," answered the president. "Do you remember 'Chub'?" asked Ruth. "I do," replied the president, and again shook the old man's hand warmly.

"Do you remember the charges we made together?" asked Ruth. "I certainly do, and didn't we charge brilliantly?" said the president. "I am old and almost blind," said Ruth. "I can't see you, but I can feel you," and with another warm pressure of hands the two old comrades parted and the train pulled slowly away amid cheers. The old man was led away almost overcome with emotion.

President McKinley and Mr. Ruth first met at Knoxville, Tenn., in the civil war. Major McKinley's regiment was then attached to the Fourth army corps and besieged at Knoxville. I. E. Ruth was orderly to Gen. J. C. Davis, commanding the Fourteenth corps, who, in conjunction with the Seventeenth corps, both under the command of Gen. Sherman, raised the siege. The two saw service together for nearly two years after.

Ruth, being the smallest orderly in the two corps, was nicknamed "Chub."

In 1864 Ruth had a thrilling experience which brought him into universal notice. At Burnt Hickory, South Carolina, he carried a dispatch to Gen. Steadman. The officer was in his tent asleep. The sentry told Ruth to step inside and wake him up. Ruth went in, shook the general and handed him the dispatch. The general put the dispatch under his pillow and went to sleep again. Shortly after Gen. Steadman was called to account before his superior officers for disobeying orders. His defense was that he had not received the dispatch. Upon this testimony Ruth was court-martialed and sentenced to be shot. Gen. Sherman presiding at the trial. Upon receiving his sentence Ruth addressed Gen. Sherman, saying: "I suppose I will be shot without being permitted to say a word in my defense." Gen. Sherman replied that if he had anything to say he would be heard. Ruth made the statement that he could prove that he had delivered the message, and the sentry was immediately sent for, who corroborated Ruth's story. Another messenger then dispatched to search the general's tent for the missing dispatch. It was found under the general's pillow unopened. Ruth was immediately acquitted.

RAILWAY LINES

Cochise Likely to be Most Favored Section in Arizona.

It does look very favorable for Cochise county this year, in 1902 and henceforth. The day of stagnating is about over, at least long hauls. The papers of the two counties, Pima and Cochise, have had more or less to say about the S. P. and its railway projects, with occasional allusions to the Copper Queen (Phelps-Dodge) and the Greene Consolidated, builders of railroad lines.

It is certain that Phelps-Dodge will build from Bisbee to El Paso and touch at Douglas, the new border town, at the junction with their Nacozari branch. They are getting away from the S. P., but that is not wholly possible unless they push west to the coast, and there is likelihood of their reaching Guaymas or some port below that, one of the conditions the Mexican government imposes upon railroad builders. This outlet affords an opening for lumber supplies and coal in particular, both necessary to towns, mining camps and railroads.

The latest phase in railroad building is a prospective line from Tombstone to the Turquoise district, 29 miles, a rise of 200 feet; thence to Douglas, a distance of 28 miles.

The fact is that Phelps-Dodge surveys are on the outskirts of Tombstone and indications point to their covering the route designated. If this company builds a road to El Paso, with the Bisbee district, the valleys and also the Nacozari district as feeders, it looks reasonable that they tap the Tombstone district, where 300 men will be employed before the end of this year; also the Turquoise district, where there are now 50 men employed in the Ryan, Copper Belle, Great Western and Turquoise camps. This route will not take in Bisbee, but will go through the Sulphur Springs valley, in the nature of a branch to the A. & S. E., Bisbee-El Paso (Phelps-Dodge) through line.

This is one of the projects in sight according to well informed people whom the Star representative encountered this week.

On the other hand, the Southern Pacific has an eye to the main chance, and it will not be surprising to see that company tap Tombstone, the Turquoise district and Pearce. These districts and to the transcontinental route. The run from Tombstone via Turquoise and Pearce to Cochise Station is 45 miles, or thereabouts, as the line would likely be built.

It is known that S. P. officials have been over the route and to La Cananea. So keep your eye on Cochise county and watch for big things in railroad and town building, opening of mining districts and increased population. To go with this, more cattle raising and expansion in agricultural pursuits.—Star.

GLOBE SIGHTS.

It is a bad sign if people smile at your misfortune.

A boy has the girl and wild duck mania at about the same time.

When a brakeman has a tooth pulled, he says he "had a spike pulled."

A woman isn't thoroughly pleased unless she feels that she must kiss someone, and do it right away.

Milliners say some women "think" and "look around" three weeks before buying a hat.

When a man past 40 hears the word "middle age," he shies like a town horse when it sees a harvesting machine.

The first hint that she is getting old is given to a woman by her milliner, and then she begins to trade somewhere else.

When a man's engagement is announced in the papers and he gets mad about it, it is a sign that he tried to get away and couldn't.

REFORM.

Men stand in fear of future storm.

When politicians prate "reform." Of course, 't would be sheer wickedness to say that men shall not progress; To bid the politician halt And never rectify a fault.

But "Oh!" "Alack!" likewise "Alas!" The things that sometimes come to pass.

Depress us 'till we almost say: "Let sinners plod the old time way!" For they, it cannot be denied, Are ten times worse when they backslide.
